EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Midtown Park public art plan reflects the aspirations of a broad cross-section of stakeholders, community members, and the MidCorp Board of Directors, for the development of a new park that will be an important art and cultural destination. During the research and visioning phase of the plan's development the consultants spoke to a comprehensive selection of business, community and arts leaders to gather suggestions regarding the role art and artists could play at Midtown Park.

A number of key findings emerged from this process which shaped the concepts and recommendations contained in the plan. A remark in conversation with Representative Garnet Coleman, a longtime friend of the arts in Houston, led to the idea that the park celebrate Houston's authentic art scene. Midtown Park can become the place that celebrates Houston's remarkable creative community by commissioning major works by Houston artists, by providing the infrastructure necessary to function as a truly flexible event and performance venue, and by developing its own unique niche in the arts ecosystem.

In developing this plan, a VISION of Houston's art park emerged.

4. CANDY CHANG

Located at the geographic center of Houston, Midtown Park will be a neighborhood jewel and a destination for all, Houstonians and visitors alike. In developing this plan, a vision of Houston's art park emerged. A hub for artists and creative activity that highlights the breadth and depth of the city's arts community and that engages national and international artists through ongoing partnerships with Houston's diverse cultural organizations.

Original works of art will define Midtown Park from the start of construction, with a specially commissioned website that serves as a platform for artists and a series of exciting temporary art projects that will engage the public's imagination. Permanent iconic works of art by acclaimed artists, created specifically for the park, will help heighten Midtown Park's identity and contribute to an enhanced sense of place. Finally, ongoing cultural programs and arts installations from a window gallery that will host rotating exhibits to major temporary installations, performances and events, will ensure that Houston's new art park is at the heart of Houston's vibrant art scene.

THE PLANNING PROCESS

Successful art plans are tailored to the place they are created for and are responsive to the context, much like the art that will ultimately result from the plan's implementation. In developing ideas for Houston's new Midtown Park, the consultants started by interviewing and meeting with the park planners and designers, as well as a broad cross-section of park stakeholders including adjacent arts organizations, business owners, and leaders in Houston's diverse arts community. The purpose of the meetings was both to solicit input on potential needs that the art in the park could address, as well as to develop a clear idea of existing cultural programming in nearby neighborhoods and parks. The consultants also reviewed relevant planning documents for the Midtown area, including a new 10 year Service Plan and the draft Cultural Arts Master Plan. The City of Houston's Arts and Cultural Plan was being developed at the same time and the consultants reviewed the draft document. The Midtown Public art plan is in line with the recommendation in the City's plan to expand arts offerings into neighborhoods.

Midtown Park can become the place that CELEBRATES THE REMARKABLE CREATIVE COMMUNITY that nurtures some of the nation's most inspired talents.

KEY FINDINGS

1. CELEBRATE THE AUTHENTIC HOUSTON ART SCENE

The consultants' research revealed a keen desire to highlight and celebrate the work of artists based in Houston, or who maintain close ties to the area. Houston boasts one of the largest concentrations of artists and arts production in the nation. This vibrant arts community is home to a remarkable array of world renowned artists. By commissioning major works by Houston artists and facilitating ongoing opportunities for artists to engage in temporary art programs, Midtown Park can become the place that celebrates the remarkable creative community that nurtures some of the nation's most inspired talents.

2. THE ARTS ARE CENTRAL TO MIDTOWN'S CHARACTER

Midtown, which now includes the Museum District, is home to a large array of arts and cultural institutions, non-profit organizations, and businesses, as well as individual artist studios that help to shape the character of the area. Midtown has also been officially recognized as an arts district by the State, through the Texas Commission on the Arts.

3. DEVELOP THE PARK'S INFRASTRUCTURE

In conversations with the many area arts organizations, one of the consistent recommendations was that the park planners and designers include adequate infrastructure to support a wide variety of performances and arts events.

4. CREATE UNIQUE PROGRAMS AND PARTNERSHIPS

The park needs to develop its own niche in the arts ecosystem and identify partnerships and programs with neighborhood and regional arts organizations, as well as cultural heritage groups that are not duplicated elsewhere.

5. PARK MAINTENANCE

The consultants heard numerous concerns regarding the long term maintenance of the park. Of particular concern was the potential interaction of Houston's homeless population and the parks water features.

MIDTOWN PARK ART RECOMMENDATIONS

Midtown Park is located at the geographic center of Houston and is envisioned as a remarkable asset for the neighborhood, as well as a destination for all, Houstonians and visitors alike. One of the aspirations articulated for the park is that it be known as the artists' park or Houston's art park, a special place where programming revolves around art and there are many opportunities to engage in creative activities in new ways. Midtown Park is envisioned as the ideal art partner, the place that artists and arts organizations think of first when exploring a location or collaboration for an innovative project.

Midtown Park will become a hub for art and creative activity by highlighting the breadth and depth of the city's arts community, and will engage national and international artists through ongoing partnerships with Houston diverse cultural organizations.

The recommendations for art for Midtown Park are based on this vision and structured in four distinct categories, each of which will address different aspects of the park and achieve a different purpose.

1. PROJECTS DURING CONSTRUCTION

a. Purpose

- Temporary art projects during the construction phase will help build excitement about the park, as well as interest in the broader art program.
- The projects will provide opportunities to engage the arts community early on in the park's development, in tangible ways.
- Original content, developed by artists, will offer new ways for people to become informed about the park's development and generate interest in it as a destination.

1. PROJECTS DURING CONSTRUCTION (CONTINUED)

b. Projects

- Develop a website for the 'art park' that will serve as a platform for artists in all media, and which will evolve over time, and commission original content for the site. For example, commission a poet to write brief 'haiku' like construction updates that can be disseminated via Twitter as well as on the website. Artists could submit short movies or videos works to be featured on the site. A photographer or a videographer and/or a storyteller could be commissioned to do a series documenting the parks' construction or its neighbors, with the images featured on the website.
- Commission a series of artist 'interventions' or events at the site, from posters and murals, to projections and performances.
- Some examples of such projects include Kate Johnson's project Everywhere In Between, for Bergamot Station, in Santa Monica, CA. -- a large scale temporary transformation of public space with projection art, dance, lights & performance; Helen Lessick's project, Decimal.Points, a series of 10 colorful bookmarks reflecting upon the Dewey Decimal book classification system, distributed month-by-month free to library users during the construction of the new main branch of the Seattle Public Library; photographer Brandon Stanton's epic Humans of New York project; or the FindMeHideMe project which engages people in discovering the history of one of St. Paul, Minnesota's neighborhoods, with artists Jess Bergman Tank and Klara Wagnil (<http://findmehideme.us/about>).

These ICONIC WORKS OF ART, by world renowned artists, will be instantly recognizable worldwide and will distinguish the park as an important arts destination.

26. INIGO MANGLANO-OVALLE

27. OLAFUR ELIASSON

IV

2. SIGNATURE COMMISSION(S)

a. Purpose

- One of the major ways in which art will become permanently part of Midtown Park will be through the commissioning of one or two significant works of art which will become synonymous with the park in the same way that Anish Kapoor's sculpture Cloud Gate, popularly referred to as 'the bean', has become synonymous with Millennium Park in Chicago.
- These iconic works of art, by world renowned artists, will be instantly recognizable worldwide and will distinguish the park as an important arts destination.

b. Possible locations

The project's lead designer developed a map with a number of possible locations for art designated throughout the park (see appendix 3), which offer the potential for artists to work in a number of different ways. The final locations will be dependent on what the commissioned artists actually propose. Two likely locations for the signature commissions are to replace one of the entrance water features with a major artwork and the berm wall.

28. BETH GAHAN

30. PAUL KOMADA

29. JAKE MILLET

Many cities have developed small, street level exhibition spaces which feature rotating exhibitions for pedestrians to enjoy. One example is the Storefronts program, in Seattle, Washington, managed by the non-profit organization Shunpike, www.shunpike.org

IV

3. INTEGRATED ART PROJECTS

a. Purpose

- These two projects will enable a variety of artists/art forms to be featured and will expand the art vocabulary at in the park, by integrating work into the final design of both the open space and the adjacent structure.
- The creation of a permanent window gallery at street level, will allow Midtown Park to feature artists working outside the field of public art, with the rotating exhibitions encouraging both pedestrian traffic and return visits. The exhibits can be curated through rotating partnerships with some of the area's many artists, galleries and arts organizations.
- Between them, these installations will allow for small discoverable art moments along the street and elsewhere in the park.

b. Locations

- The window gallery will be inset into the parking structure wall on Travis and will be in partnership with the property developer, Camden. The gallery will provide an opportunity to highlight the work of talented Houston artists who do not create work suitable for permanent display in the public realm.
- An artist will be commissioned to create functional or decorative work sited along the 'bayou' or one of the other distinct areas of the park. (see map, appendix 3)

GUARANTEE

The programming will generate reasons for Houstonians to make many return visits to the park and help GUARANTEE IT IS A DESTINATION FOR ART LOVERS visiting from out of town.

4. ONGOING PROGRAMMING

a. Purpose

- The development of an ongoing art program for Midtown Park will ensure ongoing excitement, dialogue and critical attention, through the presence of working artists from Houston, around the country and around the world.
- The programming will generate reasons for Houstonians to make many return visits to the park and help guarantee it is a destination for art lovers visiting from out of town.
- Promoting the park as an ideal venue for innovative art projects will allow Midtown to develop programming partnerships with Houston's many diverse arts organizations.
- The ongoing art program will provide opportunities for the park to showcase a wider variety of artists and art forms.

b. Program typologies

The ongoing programming will consist of a series of two to three annual commissions, periodic art events planned and sponsored by the park that everyone in Houston can anticipate and look forward to, as well as more sporadic 'opportunistic' partnerships with area arts organizations. The temporary commissions will be a form of 'artist residency' and structured so that the artist receiving the commission will spend some time working in the park, connecting with and interacting with the public in a variety of ways, during the development of each commission, no matter the medium. For example a choreographer might give a talk in the park and stage rehearsals that the public could observe, followed by a brief question and answer session; or a sculptor, developing a temporary installation, might build a portion of the work in the park and invite public participation.

35. HOLLY ROTHSCHILD

37. JOSÉ SELGAS AND LUCÍA CANO

36. THOMAS SCHÜTTE

Commissioning artists to create temporary work for public spaces animates the space and engenders a conversation amongst the artists, the venue, and the public. Some examples of such highly successful programs include the Fourth Plinth, in London's Trafalgar Square and the Serpentine Pavilion, an annual program of the Serpentine Galleries in London, which commissions inspirational temporary structures by some of the world's leading architects and designers.

38. MICHELANGELO PISTOLETTO

39. JENNIFER STEINKAMP

- Core programming recommendations for the park include the following two annual commissions: a.) for a sculptural work that could use the water feature at the corner of Main and McGowen as a 'pedestal', or some other location in the park; b.) for new choreography or theater where a company would be in 'residence' in the park to develop a new work that would premiere in-situ.
- The art program in the park will primarily be structured to include a wide range of events which will include performances, festivals, and temporary installations and will vary in regards to duration and medium. Some of these events will be developed by Midtown Park and others will be partnerships where the park will primarily be serving as a venue. Staff will develop guidelines to provide partial funding for these partnerships on a case by case basis.

THE CALIBER OF THE ONGOING PROGRAMMING and the ability of park management to cultivate cultural programs, partnerships and resources, is a critical component of the vision for the park.

IMPLEMENTATION/NEXT STEPS

This section provides an overview of the initial steps in implementing the plan once it is approved and funding becomes available. Implementation is not part of the plan development, although the current scope of work does include a key implementation deliverable which is the establishment of a pool of qualified artists for the permanent artwork for Midtown Park.

1. PROJECTS DURING CONSTRUCTION

Both of these projects should be developed in the near future, as soon as funding is approved, as park construction is about to begin.

- a. Website development - next steps include the identification of an innovative web designer to create the web platform, development of guidelines regarding types of content opportunities and commissioning the initial content.
- b. A 'call for artists' (the art world equivalent of a Request for Proposals) will be developed and distributed for the temporary art projects.

2. SIGNATURE COMMISSION(S) AND INTEGRATED ARTWORK(S)

- a. Consultants will identify a small pool of up to ten highly qualified artists (or artist teams), a majority of which will be from Houston or with ties to Houston. Upon approval, this pool of artists will be invited to develop proposals for sites of their choosing in the park.
- b. Each artist (or artist team) will receive a fee of $5,000 (plus travel, if applicable) for proposal development and presentation.
- c. Proposals will be presented to a panel of arts professionals, including the consultants, and the panel will make selection recommendations which will be presented to MidCorp (or other designated body) for final approval.

3. PROGRAMMING

The caliber of the ongoing programming and the ability of park management to cultivate cultural programs, partnerships and resources, is a critical component of the vision for the park. In order for Midtown Park to become Houston's art park, Houston's extensive creative community needs to engage with the venue on ongoing basis. The diversity of Houston's arts community affords many opportunities for partnerships, both ongoing and one of a kind.

Initial conversations with neighborhood arts organizations such as the Community Artists' Collective, Diverseworks, the Ensemble, Lawndale, and the MATCH, as well as other Houston cultural presenters such as the Houston Arts Alliance and the Cynthia Woods Mitchell Center for the Arts at the University of Houston, indicated that there is tremendous interest in partnering with an outdoor venue of the anticipated caliber of the park. Non-profit arts managers also articulated a short list of attributes that would make the park an effective partner, from staffing to storage, and power to matching funds for programs. The first step in implementing the ongoing program component of the plan will be for MidCorp to identify a staff person, with a background in the arts and events, who can step into this role. This person will need to build relationships with the arts community to leverage the park's investment in ongoing arts programs.

There are a NUMBER OF OPPORTUNITIES FOR MAJOR WORKS of permanent public art.

	Window gallery upgrades b	$200,000	$200,000	$600,000
Temporary programs (first two years) c	Temporary sculpture installation	$150,000	$300,000
	Programming partnerships	$100,000	$200,000
	Program staff d	$50,000	$100,000	$600,000
GRAND TOTAL				$2,760,000

- There are a number of opportunities for major works of permanent public art. The budget envisions selecting up to two for a total of $1.5M
- This is an estimate for the cost of adding lights, outlets, panels, etc. to improve the functionality and flexibility of the window 'gallery' that Camden is planning to build.
- Since the temporary programs will be critical to the long-term success of the park, two years of program costs are included in this preliminary budget.
- An experienced arts programmer who can leverage funding and arts resources will be critical to the long-term success of the art in the park and retained on contract or as part-time staff.

By commissioning major works by Houston artists and facilitating ongoing opportunities for artists to engage in temporary art programs, Midtown Park can become the place that celebrates the remarkable creative community that NURTURES SOME OF THE NATION'S MOST INSPIRED TALENTS.
